

Lo-fi prototype

I had actually already prototyped a cart page, but I decided to update its design to make it more readable. To factor in cases where a user might have a lot of items in their cart page, I moved the total price and checkout button to the right side of the page so that it is always visible, as those are the most important pieces of information. I removed the blurb about shipping and tax, as that was a piece of information that wouldn't change on this page and wasn't relevant until the checkout process.